

1. Earth-centred worldviews and cultures

We are grounded in our interdependence with the web of life on our finite Earth.

2. High impact action by individuals and groups

We recognize that some actions matter more than others and people inspire each other and join forces in groups.

5. Sustainable living network

We collaborate boldly with others who are advancing sustainable living.

4. Life transitions and stages

We take advantage of dynamic life changes (becoming a parent, retiring, moving...) to shift everyday practices.

3. Supportive conditions by governments, cities, businesses and funders

We equip those who need to take the lead in creating the sustainable facilitative contexts and infrastructure for our daily lives.
